

Mutant body part	Description	Artifact transmutation
Dog tail 	The resistance of mutant dogs' skin to electricity and chemical agents has long been the subject of scientific attention. Since the animal's tail is almost completely free of fat tissue, it is especially suited for lab examination.	Can be used as an ingredient to reduce negative effects of electric shock and chemical burn properties
Flesh eye 	The mutated, swollen eye of the Flesh acquired a number of strange characteristics, the most useful of which is the ability to regenerate the lens. The specifics of the process are hitherto unknown, although such discovery would most certainly revolutionize modern medicine. You can play your part in scientific development by selling Flesh eyes to scientists for their experiments.
Bloodsucker tentacles 	Bloodsucker tentacles contain a special gland producing a ferment capable of dissolving the skin and simultaneously preventing blood from clotting. Discovering the ferment's composition could be the cornerstone of a whole series of great medical advances.	Can be used as ingredient to improve bleeding property or to reduce/remove negative bleeding effect
Pseudodog tail 	The resistance of mutant dogs' skin to electricity and chemical agents has long been the subject of scientific attention. Since the animal's tail is almost completely free of fat tissue, it is especially suited for lab examination.	Can be used as an ingredient to reduce negative effects of electric shock and chemical burn
Snork foot 	Snork feet contain a huge number of highly elastic tendons. This explains the beast's ability to make those unbelievably long jumps.	Can be used as an ingredient to reduce negative impact value or to add impact property for new artifact
Boar's hoof 	Boar's hooves can be used to produce a number of drugs, including an antiradiation serum.	Can be used as an ingredient to reduce negative effects of radiation or improve radiation property of created artifact
Hand of a dwarf 	The hands of Burers have obtained a myriad of attributes, most positive of which seems to be the flesh's extremely high resistance to radiation. Exactly how this is achieved is unknown; it repels gamma rays as if it were made of lead. You can do your part for the scientific community by selling all hands of Burers that you find to scientists for study	Can be used as an ingredient to reduce negative effects of radiation or improve radiation property of created artifact. Because of dwarf's ability to throw items, can be used to add telepathic property.
Hand of a zombie 	The characteristics of zombie flesh are currently unknown. You can do your part for the scientific community by selling them to scientists for study. Rumors say that the Brain Scorcher affected not only the minds of those caught in it, but also their bodies, to a point. That could explain why zombies and zombified Stalkers shrug off extremely high levels of radiation as if it was nothing.	Can be used as an ingredient to reduce negative effects of radiation or improve radiation property of created artifact. Can also improve or reduce health property.